Fight or flight are the only ways to respond to change in the natural world. However, as we like to call in the tech world, change or disruption is always at a constant. We can't battle or evade change, especially when it comes to shifts in I&O. So, what choice does that leave us? We simply need to learn and adapt so our businesses can survive through the most challenging times. With time it may even be possible to thrive. But, it all starts with staying in touch with the trends that shape the near future. 2021 promises loads of change in the realm of edge computing, cybersecurity, infrastructure management, and other operations. https://tinyurl.com/2w87ahyw #iot #data #internetofthings #business #infrastructure #networking #network #cybersecurity #ITmanagement #ITdesign #itinfrastructure #fiberoptics #itaudit #datasecuritybreach #datasecurity #cloudsecurity

Outsourcing is always a scary topic. Just the thought of letting someone outside in can be enough to turn the other direction, but as we continue to evolve globally, the need arises for better security measures to be taken. While some are comfortable with an in-house IT solution, remote IT is making its stand as we move closer and closer to total cloud integrations. Some businesses will only need one or the other, while some will benefit from utilizing both in-house and remote IT support. Need to know which one is right for your business? Read this recent publication to help you figure it out. https://tinyurl.com/ar5wz4sz #ITSupport #ITInfrastructure #itsolutions #itmanagement #itsystems #ITdesign #businessitsupport
